It is always nice to get a small bit of money back from the financial arrangement, but development of this historic downtown building could look awful if the builder goes cheap, as San Diego is likely to do given its huge budget deficit and its mone grabs at the peoples' expense like the trash 'fees' or the parking hikes (especially in Balboa Park.)

And to be honest, with the Midway development contract mod canceling 400 units in the original just a few weeks in, and the Ash Street scandals, among others, I do not think that you should give San Diego a blank check to develop the property.
