Ukraine, the Ukrainian air force said. The attacks have killed at least 30 civilians and injured more than 163, Ukraine says.

The campaign comes a week after Trump spoke to Putin by telephone and appeared ready to abandon his efforts to secure a ceasefire

Russia has clearly seen an opening as the United States - long the main arsenal of Ukraine's resistance – pulls back from the diplomatic process and resists supplying Kyiv with additional military assistance, according to analysts.

"For the last three years, for both good and ill, the policy choices in Washington had played an active, at times determinative, role in shaping the course of the war," said Phillips O'Brien, a professor of strategic studies at the University of St. Andrews in Britain. "The U.S. is slowly starving Ukraine of vital aid, which is very much understood and acted on by the Russians."

Trump's comments on Russia's prosecution of the war constituted a sharp rebuke of Putin. "I don't know what the hell happened to Putin," Trump said. "I've known him a long time. Always gotten along with him. But he's sending rockets into cities and killing people, and I don't like it at all."

The Kremlin spokesperson, Dmitry Peskov, expressed gratitude to Trump for pressing negotiations between Russia and Ukraine, calling the start of talks in Istanbul earlier this month "a very important achievement.'

"This is a very crucial moment, which is associated with an emotional overload for absolutely everyone and with emotional reactions," Peskov told reporters Monday.

Since taking office, Trump has not approved a single new military assistance package for Ukraine and has not said whether he will spend the $3.85 billion Congress has already authorized for Kyiv.

While the last shipments of weapons promised by the Biden administration are still making their way to the battlefield, no new weapons are in the pipeline. It is unclear if the White House will allow Ukraine to purchase American weapons any more.

As Ukraine runs out of interceptor missiles for its Patriot systems, Russian bombardments will become more deadly, military analysts have warned.

Meanwhile, German ries, making them harder Chancellor Friedrich Merz to intercept, according to said on Monday that there are Ukrainian officials and mili-"no longer any range restrictary analysts. Few could forget Rangel after hearing him talk. His distinctive, gravel-toned voice and wry sense of humor were a memorable mix.

That voice - one of the most liberal in the House was loudest in opposition to the Iraq War, which he branded a "death tax" on poor people and minorities. In 2004, he tried to end the war by offering a bill to restart the military service draft. Republicans called his bluff and brought the bill to a vote. Even Rangel voted against it.

A year later, Rangel's fight over the war became bitterly personal with then-Vice President Dick Cheney.

In 1987, Congress approved what was known as the "Rangel amendment," which denied foreign tax credits to U.S. companies investing in apartheid-era South Africa.

Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton noted that he urged her to run for the Senate in 2000. Former President Bill Clinton recalled working with Rangel in the 1990s to extend tax credits for businesses that invest in economically distressed areas.

Rangel became leader of the main tax-writing committee of the House, which has jurisdiction over programs including Social Security and Medicare, after the 2006 midterm elections when Democrats ended 12 years of Republican control of the chamber. But in 2010, a House ethics committee conducted a hearing on 13 counts of alleged financial and fundraising misconduct over issues surrounding financial disclosures and use of congressional resources.

misleading financial disclosure forms and improperly solicited donations for a college center from corporations with business before his committee.

The House followed the ethics committee's recommendation that he be censured, the most serious punishment short of expulsion.

Rangel looked after his constituents, sponsoring empowerment zones with tax credits for businesses moving into economically depressed areas and developers of low-income housing.

"I have always been committed to fighting for the little guy," Rangel said in 2012.

Rangel was born June 11, 1930. During the Korean War, he earned a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star. He would always say that he measured his days, even the troubled ones around the ethics scandal, against the time in 1950 when he survived being wounded as other soldiers didn't make it.
