Sounds good. I'm glad someone cares about the animals unlike the animal welfare people who have been investigating the animal abuse at Craig Netwig's and Deborah Barkley's Ranch for several years while it got worse. Maybe a bit of this money can go to hiring investigators who don't go slow on influential people.

So, who is held accountable the donations will be used for their intended purposes and not for a personal "pet" project?: 1) "used to purchase an ultrasound machine with associated software and a surgical laser" and 2) "deposited into the department's Public Education Trust Fund to fund mobile outreach events offering spay/neuter services, vaccinations, and microchipping, with the funding estimated to provide more than 800 of each of these services in underserved communities, significantly expanding access to preventative veterinary care."
