This seems to be a redo of the report presented March 4.

As far as I can tell, the housing agency (HA) does not support building cheaper housing than conventional, which is quicker to build and keep up with the market for new homes better instead of houses that might not be built for years and then you'd be less likely to end up with an oversupply of homes. And there needs to be more than 5 or 10 percent of truly low income housing.

The chart at page A-25 in the attachment emphasizes this view, with no homes permitted and completed for acutely low-income persons and only 21 for extremely low. HA needs to do better if it wants to solve the affordability/homeless crisis.

Maybe the housing agency is in thrall to big developers like Blackrock who have more interest in profit than people.

The number of house-poor or homeless people in this County is ridiculous. The Housing Agency is part of this. So do not approve of its plan or should I say scheme.
