Glad to say reviews for Wakeland Housing, the project manager, are not bad. Projects like Serenade on 43rd and The Teralta in San Diego are praised for providing a secure environment, on-site case management, and rent that scales to resident income. The company frequently uses lottery systems to manage high tenant demand. HMM.

The $206.000 per unit price isn't bad either, although I wonder how many recreational or behavioral services the developer can provide. Perhaps the Board knows. Can you tell us?
