Do not end the temporary housing without a REAL solution for those people.
San Diego failed them by falling years behind on drain maintenance. Don't fail them again.

This plan redirects money towards another program, but I don't see any plan to make sure these 2,000 people won't end up on the streets after they are evicted from the hotel voucher program.
SD has an affordable housing crisis. Since these homes were destroyed, people haven't been able to find housing in the same price range.

San Diego didn't manage its storm drains in these lower income communities. Now those same vulnerable communities are being left without housing options.

How many people are still using the hotel vouchers? Do we have an assessment of how many people will be homeless when the vouchers expire?

Temporary housing needs to continue while establishing new or renewed housing. It would be inhumane to put 800-1000 people out on the streets!

People are still suffering from the effect of the winter storms, and it is your responsibility along with the cities that neglected needed maintenance work. These people deserve to return to their houses ASAP, but if they cannot, you need to continue the hotel vouchers or whatever help they had, and in the same place.

So do not shirk your responsibility or allow anyone else to. Do not encourage them by ending the emergency.
