San Diego County leaders said they are gearing up to potentially sue the Department of Homeland Security over access to the Otay Mesa Detention Center. As NBC 7's Shelby Bremer reports, the possible legal action comes after two county supervisors... were denied access for an inspection

Lawson-Remer and Supervisor Paloma Aguirre said the board, in a closed session on Tuesday, authorized county counsel to prepare that lawsuit. It comes after the two attempted to conduct the inspection on Feb. 20, having heard those reports, including a note attached to a lotion bottle thrown over the fence last month that said detainees are not given any fresh fruit and are not allowed outside, among other concerns.

EXCLUSIVE: Secret ICE Detention Facilities Exist Around Colorado, Data Shows

by Logan M. Davis

posted on March 4, 2026

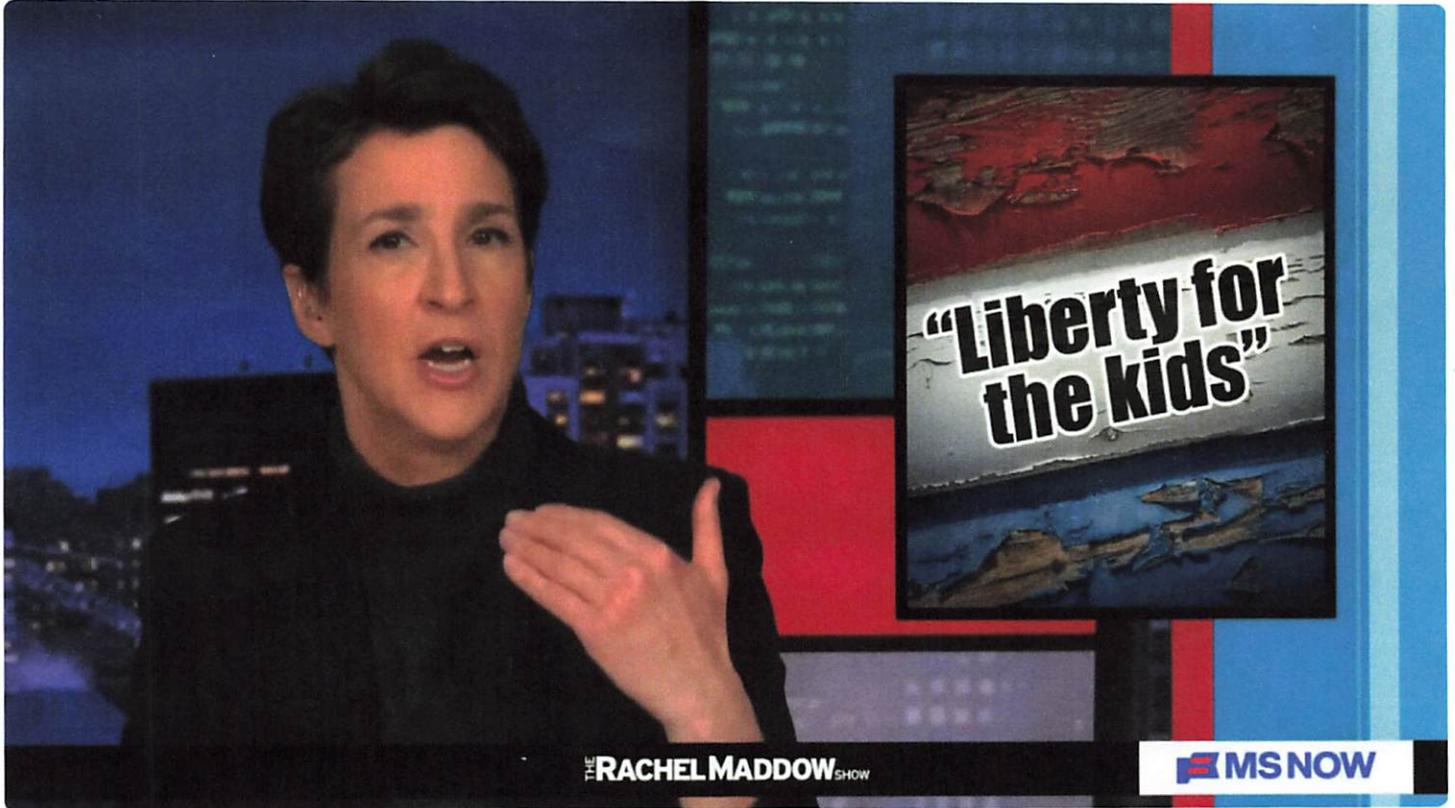

Just west of downtown Glenwood Springs, perched between Midland Avenue and Interstate 70, a strip mall houses a gym, a chiropractor's office, a tax accountant, and on the far end of the building, one less-common tenant: an ICE detention facility, one of at least nine such secretive facilities in the state.
