My name is Ryan Wolf with MAAC and we are partners in the Children First Collective. A shared service alliance will help expand important entrepreneurial experiences for child care providers who often make less than minimum wage. Models like this are being implemented across the country and are leading to more kids and families being served by the child care system. This is an important step to stabilize San Diego’s economy and child care sector.

Hi, my name is Mina Nguyen with San Diego for Every Child and I fully support the 2M investment in child care shared service alliances. In order for San Diego to be a place for families to raise children, quality child care needs to be accessible and affordable. We can accomplish that by 1) investing in the work force (development, equitable wage, etc) and by supporting child care providers in building their business models to be more sustainable. I fully support this investment.

The Hospital Association of San Diego & Imperial Counties supports the COSD to authorize $2 million of ARPA funds to expand the Child Care Shared Services Alliance Program. In our recent 2022 CHNA report, access to affordable child care and availability of child care slots were expressed as a significant challenge for our community. This program will create a more accessible and affordable child care system that meets the needs of families and supports the early care and education workforce.

Please authorize to support the competitive solicitation for a shared services child care alliance and application for future funding opportunities through the American Rescue Plan funding. Child care providers have not had specific funding allocated to them through the current or future budget. An investment in child care providers is an investment in the future.
