Nathan doesn't know about health insurance. Parents should ask local stores about how they prevent tobacco sales to minors. Where do the fees go? Wilma Wooton already makes $420,000 a year. Get her to include tobacco sales checks along with other business health department checks, or reallocate some of her salary.

As a San Diego County resident and the President of the California State PTA I support taxes to protect children by including compliance checks on tobacco retailers. San Diegans are proud of the TRL program adopted by the Board of Supervisors, which is the strongest in the County, and one of the strongest in California. This valuable program deserves funding to ensure the program truly protects children and the community from the tobacco industry.

Such as high fee will kill the small business in our neighborhood, and the it will NOT reduce the under-age smoking problem.
