The democrats are putting on quite the theatrics of clutching their pearls, exclaiming their blood is boiling and reeling from recent allegations and accusations against their hero Cesar Chavez. Dead since April 23, 1993. Democrats' reactions are transparently a politically motivated and planned response to truth. The validation that illegal immigrants take jobs of legal immigrants and Americans. And illegal immigrants should be deported. Especially those convicted of violence.

No, to the renaming as Farmworkers Day.
Most Americans do not celebrate many recognition days or months and would not plan to celebrate Farmworker's Day. Please hold your personal celebrations.
Just let March 31 remain solely March 31.

There's a scandal and suddenly you respond. There are holidays where many people are involved which are named for leaders – like Martin Luther King Day. I regard this as an excuse, not a historical thing.

In this political climate, I realize that it is important to keep a clean record but I am disturbed that Cesar Chavez and family and associates are being tarnished by mere allegations of improper sexual conduct which happened years ago.

This sort of thing can happen to pretty much any prominent person. It often ruins lives and careers for pretty much nothing.

Are you – and you wouldn't be the only County – doing this to take our minds off the child perversion you guys fostered?

Should we go back (1850, 1776, 1620, BC?) and investigate prominent people, starting with maybe those with holidays named after them? Can we at least wait for proof? And what happens when we find out the truth?

Like, what if they kept slaves? (gosh, that's actually true!)

The whole thing is silly.
