Submitted At: 8:48am 05-24-23

My name is Joan Helland, with Unitarian Universalist Church of San Diego and I am a resident of District 4.

It is critical that the County create a Worker Justice Fund. Wage theft is a major problem that affects all workers, especially workers the system undervalues, like recent immigrants and workers in industries that pay the lowest wages. Workers shouldn't go into debt, or risk losing their jobs, homes, and/or food because they stand up for their rights on the job.

Location: 92105, San Diego
Submitted At: 11:21pm 05-22-23

I vigorously support the creation of a Workplace Justice Fund. When businesses steal from their employees it is a crime. Wage theft, which occurs in many different forms, is such a crime. Sadly, the victims often lack the resources to effectively redress these crimes.

One justification for the existence of government bodies is their ability to provide resources for the common good that individuals alone cannot. It's time for the county to step up and take on this issue.

My name is Dr. Lilly Irani. I am Faculty Director of the UC San Diego Labor Center. I am also a resident in District 4.

A worker justice fund is essential to make sure that workers at all income levels, especially those essential and most undervalued workers, can meaningfully claim their legal rights. Such a fund will ensure that workers have an incentive to report wage theft, helping the county enforce our labor laws, while providing them with immediate relief that the County can reclaim.

So the general scheme seems to be that the County creates this fund to offset what the County employers individually are cheating the employees out of. Why are we, the people, paying for this? I can understand that there may be a few hardship cases, but to create a fund to pay the general workforce reeks of corruption.
