My name is Ryan Wolf with MAAC Project and we are partners in the Children First Collective. A workforce strategy for child care must be developed to sustain existing early education professionals, and help recruit qualified staff. Child care providers are small businesses that provide a critical service for our economy. Given that 90% of the workforce is women and 70% is women of color, this is an issue of equity. We need your support and action. Thank you.

Hi, my name is Mina Nguyen with San Diego for Every Child and I fully support the 10M investment the child care workforce sector. Families and child care providers have struggled to make ends meet throughout the pandemic. Without child care providers, working parents cannot go to work without compromising their other responsibilities. Some have even left the workforce and become a single income home to watch and care for their children. We need to invest in this sector to sustain the workforce

The Hospital Association of San Diego & Imperial Counties supports the COSD to authorize $10 million of ARPA funds to establish the Child Care Workforce Investment Program. In our recent 2022 CHNA report, access to affordable child care and availability of child care slots were expressed as a significant challenge for our community. This program will create a more accessible and affordable child care system that meets the needs of families and supports the early care and education workforce.

High quality, affordable, and accessible early care and education is critical to the overall well-being of children and is essential for working families. I fully support this important local investment of $10 million for the Child Care Workforce Investment Program to increase quality of care and support workforce development.

I support the full investment of $10 million for the Child Care Workforce Investment Program for the early care and education (ECE) workforce that serves the County's youngest and most vulnerable children. Increased access to high-quality ECE is a crucial building block necessary to address achievement gaps and disrupt the cycle of poverty. Please continue to make strategic investments that support San Diego County children and families.
